

Create Your Own Biopoem

Yes, it's poetry, but it's easy poetry! This poem is meant to introduce you to the class and to express some of your interests and your uniqueness. This poem is easy to write—basically, it's fill in the blank! I have provided an example of a biopoem on the back of this page.

Here's the line-by-line format you follow:

Title
(Three or four adjectives or words that describe you)
Relative (brother, sister, daughter, son of _____)
Who loves (three different things you love)
Who feels or cares about (three different feelings you have)
Who gives (three different things that you give)
Who fears (three different fears that you have)
Who would like to see (three things you would like to see)
Resident of _____
(Your Name)

Make this poem colorful, creative, and a reflection of your unique personality.
This can be on a half page or a full page.

Due _____

Please put your name and class period on the back of your biopoem.

Example:

Window to My Soul

Teacher, writer, friend
Son of Gene and Lori, husband to Amy, father to Amelia, Liberty, and Lincoln
Who loves family, Risk, and Gianni
Who cares about putting in an honest day's work,
Helping students believe in their potential,
And being the same person inside as I am out
Who gives trust, friendship, and a helping hand
Who fears elevators, rats, and the passage of time
Who would like to see Oregon, Switzerland,
And myself signing books someday
Resident of a place where mountains run deep
Trent Nelson